(b)Building Blocks

When you're young, you learn numbers, and then later you learn how to combine and work with those numbers using symbols such as +, [ms], [ts], and =. So far in this book, you've learned several commands, but each one has been run one at a time. Commands can actually be combined in more complex and more interesting ways, however, using various symbols such as |, ≥, >>, ≤, and even ≤ and ≥ together. In fact, the ability to join commands using those symbols goes a long way to explaining the power of UNIX, as you'll see. This chapter takes a look at those building blocks that enable you to do some awesomely useful things with the commands you've learned and the commands you'll be examining in greater detail in subsequent chapters.

Oh yeah, sign me up.

I love the idea of being able to keep my plants and flowers fed after I depart, but it's sure hard to resist the drama of the terminator-style liquid nitrogen shatter action.

Scott -- you could add a section to the part of your will that dictates the details of your funeral to include your freeze-dried remains. You could literally go out with a bang when they shatter you into powder!! You could dictate a musical score to go with the routine. Everyone leaves with a little Scott dust on them, leaving you "with us" forever -- or at least until we shower.

Sonnet VIII: If Your Eyes Were Not The Color Of The Moon

Pablo Neruda

If your eyes were not the color of the moon, of a day full [here, interrupted by the baby waking – continued about 26 hours later]
of a day full of clay, and work, and fire, if even held-in you did not move in agile grace like the air,
if you were not an amber week,

not the yellow moment
when autumn climbs up through the vines;
if you were not that bread the fragrant moon kneads, sprinkling its flour across the sky,

oh, my dearest, I could not love you so!
But when I hold you I hold everything that is – sand, time, the tree of the rain,

everything is alive so that I can be alive:
without moving I can see it all:
in your life I see everything that lives.

Appendix C: WebSanity Ongoing Services

WebSanity provides small-group curated website hosting, content management system services, and ongoing support for a monthly base fee. Our services differ significantly from those offered by discount bulk hosting services.

Content Management System

WebSanity uses the Concrete5 open source content management system (CMS) to allow our clients to edit and manage their sites. We chose Concrete5 after a comprehensive analysis of CMS offerings. We believe it provides the best combination of power and ease of use for the kinds of sites we serve.

In addition, we carefully configure and extend Concrete5 to meet our clients' needs. With a bulk hosting service you are responsible for installing, configuring, and modifying your own CMS.

Support & Consulting

Support is included. We provide both technical and editorial support about the best way to organize, present, and handle content. Also, we offer counsel on how to be most efficient with the CMS.

We provide live support through several channels:

- Email-driven support ticket system
- Instant message (Skype, SMS, or iMessage)
- Video chat
- Screen sharing
- Phone

For information on contacting us for support, see <http://help.websanity.com/contacting-websanity>.

All the support we provide is personal. Our clients always get one of the principals of the company. We're all familiar with the CMS and each of us has about twenty years of technical experience. We commonly provide consulting about a wide range of Web topics.

Our CMS documentation is custom-written by WebSanity for our client editors and webmasters. You don't have to wade through technical jargon to learn how to do anything the CMS can do.

Spotlight on steroids

- » Search your Mac, contacts, dictionary, & the Internet
- » Calculator
- » Clipboard manager
- » Use mini player to control iTunes
- » Issue system commands
- » Run terminal (command line) commands
- » Create, download, & use workflows that do almost anything

Default key command for Spotlight is ⌘_ Default key command for Alfred is ⌘_

However, I use Alfred far more than Spotlight, but I still want Spotlight to be available

Solution: switch key commands so Spotlight is invoked with ⌘_ & Alfred is invoked with ⌘_

Startup: ☒ Launch Alfred at login

Start Alfred automatically.

Alfred Hotkey:

^⌘⇧⌘ Space

Select this field and type the hotkey you want to use to show Alfred. Some hotkeys may not work, please refer to the help.

Where are you:

United States

This tells Alfred which websites to use for web searching such as google.ca or ebay.com. If your location isn't listed, simply select 'international' and add custom searches for your location.

Shutdown:

Quit Alfred

Alfred will still launch at login if selected.

Welcome to Alfred v2

Alfred v2 helps you be more productive. Tailor custom searches and workflows to save time in frequent tasks, use the dictionary and clipboard to never forget a thing, and do it in style with themes.

Want to get started? In the Features tab, you'll find most of the preferences so have a look at what's new! Once your Powerpack is activated, go ahead and create a few cool workflows, launching them with keywords or hotkeys. And finally, deck your Alfred window out in your favourite colours in the Appearance tab.

Cheers

11 The find Command In the last chapter, we covered commands that let you search for files (locate) and data within files (grep). The third command in the powerful triumvirate is find. While locate searches a database for files, which makes it fast but dependent upon a constantly updated database, find searches for files on the fly using criteria that you specify. Since find has to parse through your file structure, it's much slower than locate, but you can do lots of things with find that aren't possible with locate. Throughout this chapter, we're going to work on an external hard drive that contains music and related files and is mounted at /media/music. Also notice that there are spaces in the filenames, which explains the quotation marks you will see in various commands. You'll see that find allows us to slice and dice the files in a variety of ways. 9780321833884_ch11.indd 291 11/3/15 9:54 AM11/3/15 9:54 AM 292 CHAPTER 11 The find Command NOTE: When I updated this book for its second edition, I removed info about find -fprint (which prints the results of the find command to a file). You can find the original text on my website at www.granneman. com/linux-redactions. Find Files by Name find -name The find command is basically used to look for files by name, or part of a name (hence, the -name option). By default, find is automatically recursive and searches down through a directory structure. Let's look for all MP3 files sung by the unique group The Shaggs on the music drive: $ cd /media/music $ find . -name Shaggs ./Outsider/Shaggs What? This can't be correct! The find command found the folder, but not the songs. Why? Because we didn't use any wildcards, find looked for files specifically named "Shaggs." There is only one item with that precise name: the folder that contains the songs. (Since a folder is a special kind of file, it's counted!) We need to use wildcards, but in order to prevent the shell from interpreting the wildcards in ways we don't intend, we need to surround what we're searching for
